1. Statement of Housing Needs

[24 CFR Part 903.79 (a)]

9,000 families with incomes of less than $15,000 a year, in the City of Arlington, are cost-burdened in their current apartments or houses, based on an Arlington Housing Needs Analysis prepared by BBC Research & Consulting. BBC's report, submitted May 18, 1999, was prepared for the Arlington Housing Authority (AHA) and the City of Arlington. BBC's analysis of estimated 1998 household incomes and 1998 house prices and rental rates indicated that the need for low cost housing exceeds the supply. The initial gap between the number of households with annual incomes of less than $15,000 and the number of housing affordable to those families is about 12,500, BBC reports. After an adjustment for the number of elderly, low-income families that have paid off their homes and the number of households benefiting from tenant-based rental assistance, BBC reports, there is still a gap of approximately 9,000 units.

Based on a tabulation of 1990 Census data prepared for HUD by the Bureau of the Census, HUD estimates that AHA's jurisdiction, the City of Arlington, has 6,448 very low-income household with severe rent burdens. HUD defines housing need, as the number of very low-income renter households with severe rent burden, based on 1990 Census data. Very low-income is defined as income at or below the Section 8 very low-income limits. Severe rent burden is defined as a household paying 50 % or more of its gross income for rent. The City of Arlington's housing need is 0.0186 relative to the State.

$9,405 is the average annual income for participants in AHA's Section 8 Program. $49,600 is Arlington's estimated median income. The National Priorities Project, a nonprofit advocacy group, released a report December 8, 1998, that calculated the "living wage" in Texas, for a family of four, - enough money to cover basic costs of housing, food, transportation, health and day care, clothing telephone and taxes – at $30,367. Of the 2,871 families on AHA's waiting list, 2,345 are extremely low-income families with worst-case housing needs.

As Arlington has grown over the past eight years, it has also become more racially and ethnically diverse, although the proportion of minority residents is still lower in Arlington than in the Metroplex as a whole. The North Central Texas Council of Governments' population estimate, which was issued in April 1999, is 309,250. Over the period 1990 through 1998, Arlington's population as a whole grew by 16%. Over the same period, the city's Black population grew by 33% to a total of almost 30,000 people; The Asian population grew 58% to 16,700; and the Hispanic population grew 73% to 39,000.

The Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS) was a plan required of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) grantees in 1994. HUD commissioned a special tabulation of 1990 census data to provide CDBG grantees with useful housing data to help them complete the plan. In 1998, approximately two-thirds of Arlington residents were white. CHAS dataset provides the following 2002 projection data, on the severe housing needs of very low-income families in Arlington by race/ethnicity: White Non-Hispanic households; 8,255; Black Non-Hispanic households 2,439 and Hispanic households 1,826. Of the above 12,520 families, CHAS data estimates that 10,642 (85%) are cost burdened in their current apartment or house, as they are paying 50% or more of their gross income for rent.

The AHA waiting list indicates a disproportionate need for rental assistance among Blacks and Hispanics. Moreover, a greater need for rental assistance for Blacks and Hispanics is indicated in the median family household income by ethnicity. 1990 Median family income for Whites in Tarrant County (1990 U.S. Census Bureau) was $42,800, compared to $25,100 for Blacks and $29,400 for Hispanics.

While Arlington has more than 14,800 households with annual incomes under $15,000, it has little housing stock (approximately 2,300 units), according to BBC's report, that is affordable for individuals and families with very low incomes. Moreover, the report notes that the Metroplex's economic recovery and the absorption of the glut of apartments built during the 1980s have produced a strong rental market in Arlington.

Vacancies are low and rents are rising. The median rent in Arlington has risen from $444 in 1990 to $575 in 1998. BBC estimates that an annual household income of $23,000 is required to afford the median apartment. The shortage of affordable rentals also means that households currently receiving rental assistance would have great difficulty making the transition to a market-rate apartment. For families with disabilities, finding an apartment that is both affordable and accessible can be especially difficult.

In the City's 2000-2005 Consolidated Plan, PCensus was used in estimates of the age, income and racial distribution of Arlington residents. PCensus is a widely used commercial database that provides demographic estimates and projections based upon government data and commercial information. Based on PCensus projections of income distribution within Arlington in 2003, BBC estimated that three-fourths of Arlington's new households would be able to afford rental market rents. About 2,450 new households (25percent of the 9,258 net new households) will be low-income renters who will need rental assistance. Without this assistance they are likely to spend more than 30 percent of their income on rent. Further concerns noted in BBC's report are as follows:

- Approximately 600 new households each year between 1999 and 2003 will move to Arlington and need some type of rental subsidy to avoid being cost-burdened.
- Many current and future Arlington workers cannot afford to live in the City without being cost-burdened. There is an increasing mismatch between the housing available in Arlington and the jobs located in Arlington, especially for lower income service industry workers in the Entertainment District.

- The 9,000 cost-burdened households referenced above are a particularly difficult group to serve. They have incomes below $15,000 and many need some type of supportive services.
- While relatively well-developed, Arlington’s continuum of care lacks adequate case management to take advantage of the available housing stock.

Moreover, BBC noted that many interviewees and forum participants mentioned the lack of public transportation as a major factor that impacts housing needs. It is particularly important for low-income families. Lack of public transportation impacts people’s job choices and housing choices. Additionally, the BBC report noted that local residents emphasized several concerns regarding Arlington’s rental housing stock: the concentration of apartments in North Arlington, the declining condition of some rental houses and apartments, increasing rents and the inability of some service sector workers to find affordable rentals. The older units, moreover, in the worst condition tend to be the most affordable.

A. Housing Needs of Families in the Jurisdiction/s Served by the PHA

Based upon the information contained in the Consolidated Plan/s applicable to the jurisdiction, and/or other data available to the PHA, provide a statement of the housing needs in the jurisdiction by completing the following table. In the “Overall” Needs column, provide the estimated number of renter families that have housing needs. For the remaining characteristics, rate the impact of that factor on the housing needs for each family type, from 1 to 5, with 1 being “no impact” and 5 being “severe impact.” Use N/A to indicate that no information is available upon which the PHA can make this assessment.

C. Strategy for Addressing Needs

Provide a brief description of the PHA's strategy for addressing the housing needs of families in the jurisdiction and on the waiting list IN THE UPCOMING YEAR, and the Agency's reasons for choosing this strategy.

AHA seeks to expand affordable housing opportunities for eligible families, to include effective community partnerships that promote economic self-sufficiency. AHA's strategy for addressing the housing needs of the poorest in our community involves flexible partnering with local government, nonprofits, property owners, lenders, advocacy groups, various social service providers and faith-based groups. Moreover, AHA seeks to utilize HUD funds, AHA services and community partnerships in a fashion that fosters stable and livable neighborhoods. In addition to seeking additional HUD funds, AHA, in the upcoming year, will assess opportunities to leverage private and public resources to expand affordable housing stock for the extremely low-income families in our community.
