[24 CFR Part 903.7 9 (r)]

The annual plan sets two primary objectives for Fiscal Year 2003.

1. Improve the living environment for Planters II residents.
2. Improve waiting list management and lease 100% of Section 8 activity.

To arrive at the first goal, LHA is expending $501,500 on major capital improvements to remove exigent health and safety problems for Planters II, and will expend $25,000 to improve exterior lighting for Public Housing Drug Elimination Program needs.

To arrive at the second goal, equally important goal, LHA will improve intake and processing Section 8 applicants through to lease up by upgrading the receptionist job to require full intake and housing specialist duties.

The balance of the full report shows the details needed to accommodate both objectives.

(2) Family Self Sufficiency program/s

2.B. N/A. Neither Planters II nor the Section 8 contracts currently in effect require LHA to establish Family Self Sufficiency programs. However, the City’s Community Development Department (See attachment 1) assists eight social service agencies which form the continuum of care for lower income households, and homeless persons/families. As a small housing agency in a small community, many of the ideals and objectives of a self sufficiency program are being met by these agencies. To provide a similar service through LHA would be duplicative and would probably be counter productive. These agencies currently help families make the transition to self sufficiency: Basic transportation, housing counseling, eviction intervention and other essential housing services – Catholic Community Services; Emergency housing (sheltering) -- Alliance Against Family Violence (abuse victims), American Red Cross (disaster victims), Salvation Army; Medical needs of the uninsured – St. Vincent’s Clinic; Education and training – Outfront; Child care services – AAFV, Big Brothers/Sisters & Neighborhood House. CCS also provides four transitional housing opportunities for persons willing to commit to self-sufficiency counseling and objectives. The service is being provided, but not by the Housing Authority.

Introduction.

The Planters II Project Based Housing and the Section 8 Tenant Based Housing programs are sub-departments within the City's Community Development Department. Therefore, major policy acts created for Community Development programs apply to the housing divisions as well. When the department submits an Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing Choice, or produces its annual review of housing needs of low-income families and special populations to the governing body, the resulting policy is carried out by all city departments including the housing divisions. Civics lesson aside, deconcentration planning is constructed from the CD plans.

Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing Choice. The city's 2000-05 Consolidated Plan analyzed barriers to finding decent, affordable housing in Leavenworth. It referenced an earlier study which identified discrimination against families with children, discrimination against racially mixed couples, too few housing opportunities for lower income families in new developments, and reluctance to reinvest in lower income neighborhoods (empirical observations, not backed by statistics or legal cases). This is an honest assessment which was correlated to a regional survey performed by the Mid America Regional Council. The attitude sampling noted concerns about the city's zoning requirements and an absence of child care services in the vicinity of lower income families.

The community has addressed most of those concerns in a variety of ways. The primary action has been to encourage new apartment construction in higher income neighborhoods financed by Low Income Housing Tax Credits. The Oaks, a 152-unit complex, is set on the grounds of a 9-hole golf course (operated by the Lawrence-Alvamar group). It is located in the south central portion of the city's growth path. Another LIHTC family property was developed at Limit and State streets in the southeast growth corridor (24 units). A for-elderly/disabled complex was built in downtown Leavenworth (one block east of Planters II), also using LIHTC financing and the Cody Plaza at 101 Shawnee Street (across the street from Planters II) opted out of their HUD contract and LHA now administers special Section 8 vouchers to the existing tenants who were there when the owner opted out of their contract. Cody Plaza also accepts newly issued Section 8 voucher holders. It is in the makes for an apartment (loft style) complex to be remodeled/constructed located just north across the street from Planters II. The owner will also accept Section 8 vouchers. There are to be 54 loft style apartments.

Building lower income housing is the quickest way to make affordable housing available, but it also has another dynamic impact on the issue of discrimination: As the new units fill up, lower cost housing units are vacated and landlords are more concerned with keeping their rental units occupied than by their personal views on race, gender, religion, age, or family status.

Minority and low income concentrations by census tract: The 1990 census shows two concentrations of minority persons in excess of the city's 22% minority population. CT 705 is 56% minority and lower income families constitute 71% of the population there. CT 701 is 49% minority with 77% below LMI limits (80% of median). Although the section 8 can track the migration of assisted households out of these neighborhoods, there is no statistical proof to demonstrate the degree of change. By observation, however, these two areas are very likely still the most concentrated lower income areas of the community. Increases in LMI have probably occurred in CT 702, 703, and 704 (the older, established neighborhoods), but many families have been served by the new housing developments which should significantly increase the low income percentage of population in CT 706 and 707 (primary new growth areas). The City will update its CP and will prepare a new Housing Quality & Work Responsibility Plan when the new census information is available.

Section 8 statistics: Since 1999, there are over 45 new Section 8 contracts (20% of non-Cody vouchers) with The Oaks and Courtyard projects (CT 707). Partly because of apartment availability, the program strength has risen to 240 contracts under lease today, compared with 190 contracts in 2001. This is significant movement, and it will continue to happen.

Deconcentration Plan: The city's deconcentration plan is simple: build affordable housing stock in a variety of new growth neighborhoods and the percentage of lower income households will increase in the receiving census tract. In the older neighborhoods, programs and incentives to build good quality in-fill developments coupled with efforts to return single family rental properties to owner opportunities, will increase the number of middle income families. The best part about the plan is its reliance on private investment. The rest of the development story is encouraging. These properties are not all designated for lower income families. The Oaks is 50/50, which insures a tenant mix of subsidized and non-subsidized families, and nobody know the difference. The plan is simple, on the surface anyway, but it comes about through the effort of hundreds of people involved with the planning, purchasing, financing, and management.
