ii. Executive Summary of the Annual PHA Plan

[24 CFR Part 903.7 9 (r)]

Provide a brief overview of the information in the Annual Plan, including highlights of major initiatives and discretionary policies the PHA has included in the Annual Plan.

Reductions in funding will result in lower payment standards used to calculate rental subsidies. The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2005 required HUD to use a different formula for calculating renewal funding for the Housing Choice Voucher Program. Furthermore, all housing authorities are required to operate their programs within these budgetary constraints.

The new formula resulted in a loss of approximately $90,000 per month for required rental subsidy payments, thereby forcing the Inglewood Housing Authority (IHA) to explore ways to reduce costs. As an alternative to terminating families from the program to reduce costs, the IHA will lower payment standards to 90% of HUD's Fair Market Rents (FMR's).

Prior to the new funding formula, the IHA established payment standards at 110% of the FMR. However, lowering payment standards to 90% will enable the IHA to operate within current budgetary constraints. This will result in an increased rent burden to participating families.

In addition, the lower payment standards will negatively impact the Section 8 Homeownership Program. The rising cost of home prices combined with lower payment standards will make continued operation of this program infeasible. However, should participants find suitable properties that are affordable within these price limitations, every effort will be made to assist them toward their goal of homeownership.

Other cost reduction methods include increased enforcement of family obligations. The IHA will step up its efforts to investigate and ultimately seek to terminate families found to be in violation of program requirements, such as failure to maintain the dwelling unit in accordance with Section 8 Housing Quality Standards; failure to report increases in household income; allowing unauthorized persons to occupy the subsidized unit and criminal and drug-related activity.

Finally, the IHA may suspend new admissions to the Family Self Sufficiency (FSS) Program. A main feature of this program is the provision of escrow deposits for families whose incomes have increased. Normally, increased income means a reduction in rental subsidy; however, the FSS program keeps the rental subsidy at the same level as a result of required escrow deposits.
