ACCOUNTING:
The activity of providing quantitative information, primarily financial in nature, that is intended to be useful in making economic decisions; the process of measuring, recording, summarizing and reporting the assets, liabilities and owner's equity of an enterprise and the changes in them.

ACCOUNTING PERIOD:
A length of time established as a period for which accounting activity will be recorded, summarized, and reported. Accounting periods provide the divisions required for comparative financial analysis. Normally, they are established monthly for interim statements and annually for completed audited statements and disclosures.

ACCOUNTS PAYABLE:
All amounts owed for goods, properties or services which were purchased on credit and have been received. See definition of accrued liabilities, below.

ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE:
All amounts owed to an entity for facilities or services that were provided during the current or prior accounting period(s). (Rent that is due or overdue, including government Rent Supplement amounts, is a common example of an account receivable).

ACCRUAL BASIS OF ACCOUNTING:
The method of accounting in which revenue is recognized when earned (regardless of when cash has been received) and expenses are recognized when incurred (regardless of when cash has been paid).

ACCRUALS:
Entries made at the end of an accounting period which are due entirely to the use of the accrual basis of accounting; i.e., to record expenses incurred but not paid.

ACCRUED LIABILITIES:
Amounts computed by an entity as owed to outsiders for goods or services received but not invoiced. Examples include utilities and wages where the service period does not coincide with the financial statement period of the project.

AMORTIZATION:
(1) The portion of a mortgage payment which represents a payment of principal. (2) The spreading of the cost of certain assets over more than one accounting period.
ASSETS:
Economic resources used by the business entity and expected to benefit future operations.

AUDITING:
The examination of financial statements and their underlying data to determine whether the statements are fairly presented in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Auditing is done by CPAs or others licensed by the state to do such work.

BALANCE SHEET:
The basic financial statement which presents the assets, liabilities and owner's equity of an entity. The total of the assets must equal (balance) the total of the liabilities and owner's equity.

BOOKKEEPING:
The process of recording transactions in an entity's books of accounts.

CAPITAL:
The dollar balance of the amount of ownership interest of the owners of an entity. Also referred to as Owner's Equity.

CASH:
Currency, checks and other negotiable instruments acceptable for direct deposit by a bank.

CASH BASIS OF ACCOUNTING:
The method of accounting in which revenue and expenses are recorded and reported in the accounting period in which cash is actually received or disbursed, regardless of when the related goods or services were received or provided. The cash basis of accounting does not follow generally accepted accounting principles.

CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT (CPA):
A person who is licensed by the state to offer professional auditing and accounting services to the public; license is granted upon successful completion of an examination and completion of qualified professional experience.

CHART OF ACCOUNTS:
A list, by number and title, of all of a development's accounts, grouped according to type of account. The Chart of Accounts prescribed by HUD for insured multifamily projects is at 30, Chapter 4 of HUD Handbook 4371.1.
COMMINGLING OF FUNDS:
The mixing together of funds of more than one project into one account or mixing one project's security deposit funds with its operating funds. Commingling of funds of more than one project, such as by a managing agent in an Imprest Fund, is permissible only with prior HUD approval. Commingling of security deposits is never permissible.

COMPILATION:
An accounting service in which the accountant prepares the financial statements without expressing any assurance that the statements are accurate and complete or are in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

CONSISTENCY:
A convention in accounting that once an accounting method (such as depreciation) has been adopted it should not be changed without full disclosure and an explanation of the impact of the change on published financial statements.

CONTRA ACCOUNT:
An account established to record offsetting liabilities or reductions in value to another account(s). Examples of contra accounts include Accumulated Depreciation of Buildings and Equipment, Allowances for Doubtful Accounts Receivable, and the liabilities applicable to security deposit accounts. The manner in which contra accounts are to be reported on financial statements varies, but usually are shown separately as subtractions from the account(s) to which they are contra.

CURRENT ASSETS:
Cash and other assets that are reasonably expected to be realized in cash or used up during the normal operating period of a business, typically one year.

CURRENT LIABILITIES:
Obligations due to be paid or settled within the normal operating period of a business, typically one year.

DEFAULT:
There are two types of defaults: (1) fiscal and (2) covenant.

(1) A fiscal, or monetary, default exists when the owner fails to make any payment due under the mortgage.

(2) A covenant, or technical, default exists when the owner fails to perform any other covenant under the provisions of the mortgage or of the regulatory agreement which is incorporated into the mortgage. A lender becomes eligible for insurance benefits on the basis of a mortgage covenant default only after the lender has accelerated the debt and the owner has failed to pay the full amount due, thus converting the covenant default to a monetary default.

DEPRECIATION:
The process of distributing the cost of fixed assets over a period of years, in a systematic and rational manner.

DISBURSEMENT:
Any outlay of funds, either in cash or by check.
