The 21st Century Cities (21CC) Initiative at Johns Hopkins is a university-wide Signature Initiative that brings together civic leaders, top Johns Hopkins researchers, students, and other universities worldwide with a vital interest in cities.

Our goal is to catalyze the potential and confront the pressing needs of cities in the 21st Century, like Baltimore, that have had to address sharp demographic and economic changes.

* indicates that the probability of being in extreme poverty is statistically significant different from 1996 at the .05 level or higher

What does it feel like to be that hungry?

“Well, actually, it feel like you want to be dead. Because it’s peaceful being dead.”

--Tabitha Hicks, 18, Mississippi Delta
What does it feel like when the food stamps run out and your daughter still needs to eat?

“Like I didn’t eat for four days because I wasn’t hungry...To be honest, I’m so used to it that I don’t even feel it anymore. I don’t feel it at all anymore.”

--Rae McCormick, Cleveland
What does it feel like to work in the freezing cold, cleaning derelict houses?

“We’d have sweaters, we’d have coats. You had to have gloves. ... The really didn’t supply us with things for our health. It really wasn’t a safe environment.”

--Jennifer Hernandez, Chicago
What do you feel like after you donate plasma twice a week, for $60 total?

“I get tired. Especially if my iron’s down, I get, like, really tired.”

--Jessica Compton, Johnson City
What is it like to have 22 people living in a three-bedroom house?

“There isn’t a room other than the bathroom where no one’s sleeping.”

--Paul Heckewelder, Cleveland
Welfare is Dead

- Modonna Harris (Chicago) has heard that “they just aren’t giving that out anymore”

- Travis Compton (Johnson City, TN), when asked if he would apply for TANF, said “What’s that?”

- Rae McCormick (Cleveland) finally applies and is told, “Honey, I’m sorry. There are just so many needy people, we just don’t have enough to go around.”

Work or Welfare?

TANF Receipt and Household Work Effort among Children by Poverty Status, Calendar Year 2012

Notes: Authors' calculations. Data drawn from the 1996, 2004, and 2008 Panels of the SIPP. Calendar-year weights are used. Horizontal axis measures number of unique children; percentages of children and statistical significance at the top of the bars. Income dollars adjusted to January 2011$. A child must be <=18, must have an annual household income <= 150% of the poverty line, and must have low assets to be counted in any $2-a-day poverty group.
Perilous Work

Unstable Jobs

- Unsafe work condition
- Not enough hours
- Work hours fluctuate
- Labor law violations

Unstable Personal Lives

- Volatile living arrangements
  - Family and friends can be unsupportive, and even harmful

The Ripple Effects of Work

- Rae McCormick: “My dad raised me that you work for everything you have... That way, in the end of the day, you can feel good that you did that.” “I don’t like pity.” “I would rather be busy. I like to keep moving all the time.”

- Modonna Harris: “I learned so much at Stars,” a music store where she worked for eight years

- Jennifer Hernandez: “When I have been working... it seems to help me. Gives me a sense of purpose...”
The Work of Survival

- Jessica Compton (Johnson City) donates plasma weekly; for 6 hours and enough physical strain to make her tired, she earns $60. No option of overtime.

- Private charity helps, but is not evenly distributed across the country, and takes time and know-how.

- It is common to trade SNAP for cash, at 50 to 60 cents on the dollar.

- With the water shut off, Paul Heckewelder (Cleveland) "took the gutter apart, rigged it up over the garbage can" and used rainwater to flush the toilets. He collects metal, repairs his van, drives his grandkids to local food pantries—to prove how many mouths he has to feed.
Lessons for Jobs Plus

- Cash is important. Give cash incentives to “beat the hustle.” Hard to be in a training program when you are spending so much time on survival.
- Childcare and transportation are essential.
- Safe, secure, stable housing is incredibly important.
- A good job is important; many bad jobs and their conditions perpetuate the cycle of extreme poverty. The role of the larger economy?
- Those people in extreme poverty see themselves first and foremost as workers
- Supporting the community to support work.

The Ultimate Litmus Test

The ultimate litmus test we endorse for any reform is whether it will serve to integrate the poor—particularly the $2-a-day poor—into society, rather than isolate them from it.

- All deserve the opportunity to work
- Parents should be able to raise their children in a place of their own
- Sometimes work won’t work, we need a functioning cash safety net
SIPP Misreporting Cannot Explain Trends

- SIPP reporting is much better than other major household surveys
- Estimates do not behave in ways that suggest they are driven by misreporting
- We document a series of other markers of worsening conditions among the nation’s poorest
- SIPP research was driven and followed by qualitative inquiry
- Underreporting itself can be a sign of bad outcomes

American Poverty in Global Perspective

We follow Amartya Sen’s approach of looking at direct measures of well-being

- Some disadvantaged Americans have a life expectancy that parallels that of Lebanon
- For others, life expectancy rivals that in Mongolia
- African Americans face an infant mortality rate comparable to that in Tonga and Grenada
- The American poor are the most likely to lose their freedom by incarceration than any other population in the world
