Small Area Fair Market Rent Demonstration Project

October 1, 2010, will mark the start of HUD’s Small Area FMR Demonstration Project. The purpose of the demonstration is to evaluate whether setting fair market rents (FMRs) at more localized areas would allow public housing agencies (PHAs) greater fiscal efficiency and provide assisted families increased opportunities. The project will take certain pre-selected metropolitan areas and test the effects of setting FMRs for ZIP code areas. The map of Dallas gives an example of what a small area FMR might look like.

Currently, metropolitan areas have only one FMR; however, there are typically areas within a metropolitan area where the market rents are much lower or higher than FMR, potentially causing rent inflation in some areas, and effectively shutting out voucher families in others. In the past, data has not been available at the level needed to tailor FMR to the metropolitan needs. However, in FY 2011, the U.S. Census Bureau, American Community Survey (ACS) will release 5-year data sets which are expected to have sufficient data at the small area level available to permit the calculation of statistically reliable FMRs for many metropolitan areas.

HUD will want a limited number of PHAs to participate in the demonstration program, so that it may provide adequate technical assistance and be able to evaluate the effects and effectiveness of the policy. All demonstration areas will need to be committed to implementing the program to allow for evaluation, and will preferably be large enough that the small area FMRs will result in substantial variation in rent, and provide the greatest amount of data for the demonstration.

The demonstration program’s success is contingent upon having participation from voucher programs in a metropolitan area that cover a majority of tenants in that area. Demonstration PHAs must administer at least 80 percent of the voucher tenants in that metropolitan area. HCV FAQs

VETERANS AFFAIRS SUPPORTIVE HOUSING (VASH)

Question: What are the portability policies for families with a HUD-VASH voucher?

Answer: The portability policies depend on whether or not the family wants to move within or outside of the referring Veterans Affairs Medical Center’s (VAMC’s) catchment area (the service area of the VAMC).

- Within the referring VAMC’s catchment area, a HUD-VASH family can move under portability to any PHA, as long as the referring VAMC continues to provide case management. If the receiving PHA does not administer HUD-VASH vouchers, the receiving non-VASH PHA must bill the initial VASH PHA. If the receiving PHA does administer HUD-VASH vouchers, the receiving PHA may absorb the family or bill the initial PHA.

- Outside of the VAMC’s catchment area, a HUD-VASH family can only move to a new catchment area if the initial VAMC confirms that the receiving VAMC has an available case management slot. After this is confirmed, the initial PHA must ensure that the receiving PHA administers HUD-VASH vouchers and has an available HUD-VASH voucher. The receiving PHA is not allowed to bill the initial PHA and must absorb the veteran family. Therefore, the family cannot move under portability to a new catchment area if there is not a VASH PHA in the area that has a HUD-VASH voucher available.
