What's New:

Today, the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) posted two draft sections of its Single Family Housing Policy Handbook (SF Handbook) — Doing Business with FHA—FHA Lenders and Mortgagees and Quality Control, Oversight and Compliance — for stakeholder review and feedback.

(1) The draft Doing Business section contains information regarding eligibility, approval, and recertification requirements for FHA lenders and mortgagees; and
(2) The draft QC/Oversight section explains ongoing lender and mortgagee responsibility to perform institution and loan-level quality control.

The posting of these two sections is a continuation of FHA’s overall effort to develop a comprehensive SF Handbook that will be, at its completion, the single, authoritative source for all Single Family housing policy.

Both sections, as well as supporting information, will be posted for review and feedback on the SF Drafting Table on their respective web pages — Doing Business with FHA—FHA Lenders and Mortgagees and Quality Control, Oversight and Compliance. We invite voluntary stakeholder feedback on these SF Handbook sections from June 30 through July 29, 2014.

FHA will host industry briefing conference calls for mortgagees and other interested parties to review the organization and structure of the draft sections. See below for call details.

About the FHA Single Family Housing Policy Handbook Effort:

FHA’s Single Family Housing Policy Handbook effort is a multi-phased initiative to develop and publish a single, authoritative source for FHA Single Family housing policy using clear and direct language and an improved organizational structure. In fall 2013, FHA posted its first draft section, Application through Endorsement for Title II Forward Mortgages, for feedback. FHA is in the process of finalizing this section for publication in summer 2014, with a future effective date for mortgagees.
