Instructions. Project site codes should be on file with the PHA. List each project as many times as necessary to create an entry for each site in the project. For example, if a project occupies a single site, there would be one entry; if two distinct sites, there would be two entries; if a single site is divided by a major architectural barrier, such as a freeway, or topographic barrier, such as a stream, there would be two or more entries.

Clusters of four or fewer units should be considered scattered site units. Scattered site projects may be divided according to their location in distinct neighborhoods. Note any evidence of clustering of racial groups within specific sites, and identify the building(s) or location(s) of such groupings in the Project Number column.

Project Number. Use the 8 or 11-digit project number listed in the Field Office Reports Management System (FORMS) (Example: KY146002 or MN36P101001).

Project Type. See codes listed on the front of this form. If the projec is mixed use, enter it twice as if it were two separate sites.

Neighborhood. Based on on-site observations and interviews with PH/ staff, enter the code that best describes the neighborhood surrounding th site. See codes listed on the front of this form.

Vacant. Enter the number of vacant units on the site, based on the PHA' most recent records.

Minority. Enter the number of units on the site which are occupied b minority families: Black, Hispanic, American Indian or Alaskan Native, Asia or Pacific Islander.

Nonminority. Enter the number of units on the site which are occupie by White families.

Summary. Enter the totals for the PHA. If more than one page i required, enter the combined totals on the first page.
